Design Concept & Process:

The design for Night Lights began with a doodle, which was hand-drawn with a stylus, directly on the touch-screen of my Microsoft Surface Design Computer using Corel Draw. I used a trace program to turn it into separate shapes. I took a photo of one of the fabrics I dye-painted twenty years ago, then used different sections of the image to fill the various shapes in my design, resizing them, rotating them, and mirror imaging them to create the final composition. I liked the black outlines of the shapes and made them thicker, so they would show up from a distance. Once I had turned the whole design into a bitmap, I used a hue function to alter the colors in four different ways. All four color-ways were printed on cotton fabric by Spoonflower. Night Lights is the last of the four panels I quilted, using several different colors of polyester and acrylic thread, more or less echoing the contours of the shapes in the design. The finished quilt design, in these colors, suggested mysterious lights emerging on a dark night. The quilt is finished with a black binding. The backing fabric is from my Multi-Tye-Day collection, which I designed for Benartex.
